

CONGRESSIONAL SCORECARD

Measuring Support for Equality in the 119th Congress

Dear Friends,

Anti-equality Members of Congress spent the last two years trying to write discrimination against the LGBTQ+ community — and particularly against transgender children — into federal law. By and large, they were not successful, but they were relentless.

In the first weeks of the 119th Congress, anti-equality politicians in the U.S. House of Representatives passed a bill to keep transgender children from playing sports with their friends. Later, they passed a bill to make it a felony for doctors to provide life-saving, gender affirming health care. They passed another bill to take Don't Say Trans nationwide — an attempt to erase LGBTQ+ students from our schools altogether.

Republican leadership in the House also used unrelated bills to advance their anti-LGBTQ+ agenda, with dozens of different riders and amendments that sought to block access to health care, undermine marriage equality, and suppress the right to vote. Bill after bill passed through the House. But most were blocked in the Senate and never made it to the President's desk.

Meanwhile, the Trump administration waged its campaign against the LGBTQ+ community: cutting vital funding for HIV prevention and services, discharging transgender service members from the military, and coercing hospitals across the country to stop caring for LGBTQ+ patients.

While we are proud of the efforts to contain the damage, the harm done cannot be overstated. Because of the Trump administration and the 119th Congress, our nation today is less safe for LGBTQ+ Americans.

Across the country, LGBTQ+ people are living in fear for their safety and security. Out workers are being harassed on the job and even fired for who they are. LGBTQ+ students are literally being sidelined, and patients are being turned away from the doctor's office. Transgender Americans have faced especially devastating harassment and violence, and too many have made the heartbreaking choice to flee to other states or countries in order to have access to the resources and safety that they or their children need and deserve.

What we've witnessed during the 119th Congress needs to be understood for what it is — part of a coordinated effort to normalize attacks on the LGBTQ+ community, reverse our progress, and undermine democracy itself.

But even as we weather these storms, there is reason to hope. Pro-equality lawmakers were outnumbered in the House and the Senate, but still they stood firm against these bills. This Congress, Congresswoman Sarah McBride (D-DE) became the first openly transgender Member of Congress, and Congresswoman Julie Johnson (D-TX) became the first openly LGBTQ+ Member from a Southern state. Congresswoman Emily Randall (D-WA) became the first LGBTQ+ Latina in Congress, and Congressman Everton Blair, Jr. (D-GA) became the first out Black gay person elected to Congress from a Southern state. With each one of these “firsts,” Congress is made more representative of our nation.

Today, LGBTQ+ people are more visible in the halls of power and better able to speak truth to power than ever before. LGBTQ+ people now constitute 12% of the adult population. We are not a footnote. We are a force to be reckoned with. Because of our movement's might, we were able to hold back anti-equality measures.

We hope this scorecard helps you stay informed about your elected officials' records and hold them accountable. Our work ahead is not just to defeat hate but to win equality for all.

In Service,
Kelley Robinson
